Acknowledgments

This project synthesizes utility experiences with instrument-based BNR controls across the United States, and the PIs would like to acknowledge the contributions of the utility survey respondents and thank them for taking the time to share their insights. We want to acknowledge and thank the utility representatives who worked closely with the project team to develop the content for the case studies.

Thank you to our utility and project partners for providing project support including survey development input, survey responses, content for the case studies, equipment for field testing, and venues for training. Further, we would like to acknowledge and thank our Project Advisory Committee members who provided steady guidance and productive feedback throughout the execution of the project and our WRF Research Program Manager, Stephanie Fevig, for her effective management and unwavering support and enthusiasm for the work.
